

Cameco is a Canadian employer of choice for many diverse groups. Our people help us make a difference globally – and the long-term outlook for our industry remains strong.

Why Cameco?

Cameco can provide dynamic, rewarding career opportunities in the uranium mining, milling and fuel services industry.

Our values guide our business decisions and we place a safe, healthy and rewarding workplace at the top of our key measures of success.

We employ a highly diverse workforce here in Saskatchewan and around the world.

If you're looking to work in a unique, high-profile industry with worldwide operations and diverse scientific, political and environmental components - then you're looking for Cameco. We employ a wide range of occupations including - but not limited to - engineers, geologists, technologist, scientists and operators, plus an assortment of trades, from electricians to industrial mechanics.

A Diverse Workforce

- Cameco is committed to creating and maintaining a welcoming, inclusive, barrier-free work environment which allows all employees to perform their jobs at an optimal level.
- Achieving this desired environment depends upon mutual respect, creative problem solving and co-operation.

Members of a diverse workforce bring new ideas, perspectives, experiences and expertise to the company. This allows Cameco to continue to innovate, manage change, and grow as a respected industry leader and employer of choice. A diverse workforce helps Cameco to succeed.

As a federally regulated company, Cameco complies with the federal Employment Equity Act by removing barriers that may make it difficult for some people to fully participate in the workforce, including those from the following four equity groups as defined in The Act:

- women in under-represented roles
- people with disabilities
- Aboriginal Peoples
- members of visible minority groups
