

A positive, progressive culture makes us a great place to work

Toronto is Canada's largest and most diverse city and, while we are the fourth largest city in North America, we are consistently ranked one of the world's most livable cities – a place where business, finance, arts and culture thrive side by side.

We are also a forward-thinking and inclusive employer. As such, we are committed to continue building, developing and inspiring a skilled, dedicated and successful workforce that reflects the diversity of the nearly 2.8 million people that call our great city home.

Great people providing great service

More than 32,000 individuals make up the Toronto Public Service, with one mission: to serve our city's residents, businesses and visitors. Together, we strive to: deliver exceptional, equitable and accessible programs and services; be a model of public service excellence and welcome people who share our values; foster a positive, progressive workplace culture with a workforce that is representative of the citizens we serve; and set the highest standards of integrity, professionalism and ethical behaviour.

If you're considering a career with the City of Toronto, you're also prepared to join a team that makes a difference every day in the lives of those that live, work and vacation here. Need help with your job search or career? Get real-time advice from a recruiter, every Thursday, 11:30 a.m. to 12 noon. #TOTalentTalk

The City of Toronto is committed to fostering a positive and progressive workforce reflecting the citizens we serve. We provide equitable treatment and accommodation to ensure barrier-free employment in accordance with the Ontario Human Rights Code, the Accessibility for Ontarians with Disabilities Act and the City of Toronto's Accommodation Policy.
