Grow your career
at the City of London.

careers.london.ca

Grow your future with the Forest City

Join us in building a better city for all. As a part of our team, you'll have opportunities to branch out, stretch your skills, develop yourself and create a long-term career. The City of London is an equal opportunity employer. We encourage applications from all qualified individuals. Get started today!

Diversity and Inclusion

The City of London's mission is to be "A responsive and modern public service partner that fosters change to build a better London for all." The "all" underscores the City's desire to ensure London is a welcoming, inclusive and safe community for everyone. Our 2019-2023 Strategic Plan outlines the many initiatives underway to achieve that. Like many cities, London recently has increased its understanding of the challenges many of its citizens still face and heightened its commitment for action.

London City Council has publicly acknowledged that systemic anti-Black, anti-Indigenous racism and racism against people of colour exists in London, while stressing they unequivocally condemn racism in all of its forms. Mayor Ed Holder has identified "There's no room for racism in our community or any place across our country. While I'm proud of our city, there's more we can do." City Council recently funded new staff positions which will continue to advance the efforts of our Workplace Diversity and Inclusion Plan and Community Diversity and Inclusion Plan. This is an exciting time to be part of the City of London, as our committed employees and citizens work collectively to end racism and oppression in our community and workplace.

Working for the City of London

Our team delivers the essential services that have a direct impact on the lives of Londoners. We work together to deliver on Council's Strategic Plan.

We are a large team of over three thousand dedicated employees delivering over one hundred services. Our work has a direct impact on Londoners. When you work for the City of London, you'll know you're doing work that matters.