

Statistics
Canada

Statistique
Canada

Statistics Canada is the national statistical office. The agency ensures Canadians have the key information on Canada's economy, society and environment that they require to function effectively as citizens and decision makers. We hire economists, systems programmers, sociologists, mathematicians, health scientists, accountants, geographers and statisticians to help us create the data that Canadians need.

Statistics Canada is a world-renowned leader in its domain, and its employees are proud to fulfill its mission: to serve Canada with high-quality statistical information that matters. We want to help Canadians better understand their country, so they can make more thoughtful decisions. The advantages of a strong workplace cannot be understated. Diverse. Accommodating. Nurturing. Rewarding. For employees to reach their full potential, a workplace MUST meet all of these criteria. Our success lies with a dynamic workforce that strives for excellence and innovation. We are proud to provide a healthy, respectful and supportive work environment for all employees and offer opportunities to develop and acquire new skills.

We encourage our employees to innovate and strive for excellence, we promote career advancement, encourage continued learning and training, and embrace new technologies that allow us to increase efficiency and flexibility in our work environment.

Embracing diversity and inclusion

We are all unique, and tapping into these differences makes Statistics Canada stronger. As an employer, we understand that a diversity of perspectives, experiences and cultures ultimately makes our business more efficient and innovative. As such, Statistics Canada promotes the advantages of diversity in the federal government and offers interesting career opportunities and rewarding challenges for everyone. Whether you are, younger, older, a person with a disability, a member of a visible minority group, an Aboriginal person, a woman or an advocate of diversity in any way, you can be assured that you will be welcomed, and valued in our workplace.

Values like respect, inclusivity, cooperation and participation are already part of our culture. Your contribution to our organization can make the manifestation of these values stronger and benefit our entire workforce, our clients, yourself and all future employees.

What makes this work?

Our commitment to diversity and inclusion works on all levels, from the top down and from the ground up.

Our Senior Managers truly get involved through an Employment Equity and Diversity Program championed at the Assistant Deputy Minister level, our Chief Statistician who actively paves the way for diversity in our workplace and senior management champions who advocate inclusive initiatives.